Charles Kellogg Is Another New Thought Disciple.

HARLES KELLOGG, the nature singer at B. F. Keith's this week, is another disciple of the "New Thought." There are many of them in vaudeville, perhaps it may seem strange to say. Grace La Rue admits the impeachment. It would be ide to attempt to enumerate the many who are known to very seriously entertain the opinion that matter is nothing, that is to say it is simply the visible envelope of mental things.

Mr. Kellogg is a Californian, a trail comrade of John Burroughs, and a naturalist of scientific attainment. His parents brought him up in Plumus county in the California Sierras, to be entirely fearless in the woods. He early discovered his peculiar knuck of reproducing bird and animal calls.

Examination later showed that like the birds he has what is called a "ringed" throat, something the scientists say no other human being has ever possessed. Mr. Kellogg declares that it is a prenatal mark, his mother before his birth delighting in an extraordinary measure in the songs of the woodland birds.

It is chimed for him that through his fearlessness, his pecular natural sift and his knowledge of the habits and instincts of the animal kingdom, he can call the widest beasts to him and they quswer, sing to the birds and they flock to him, and fondle the most dangerous reptiles.

The ordinary human voice has about 4.000 viorations per second, but Mr. Kellogg's are said to exceed 30,000. This enables him to perform some very wonderful feats in his vaudeville act. week, is another disciple of the 'New Thought." There are

Finally, when the balky horses stopped altogether and Harris heard the whistle of the train in the distance, he lost patience, and turning to the driver of the stage said: "What on earth made them build that depot so far from the town?" The bus driver shifted his quid of tobacco, "Because they wanted it to he pear the railroad, I reckon," he said. The actor was silent.

The Difference Between Narratives and Dramas.

A GOOD story is more adaptable in the form of a photoplay than a drama, according to Clara Kimball Young. She is to appear in Washington soon in "The Common Law," adapted from Robert W. C ambers' novel of the same name.

This photoplay, she contends, is which said that Mr. Hackett's manager would like to see him at the Citerion Theater.

And Mi, Wise appeared as Falstaff three days later with not only an absolutely correct memory of his lines, but also an interpretation of the character of Falstaff which seems to have earned for him an undying fame as an actor. And the reputation he has gained as "the greatest Falstaff of all time" has unquestionably been based on his idea that Shakespeare is after all a real human being.

NEXT WEEK-MILLION DOLLAR DOLLS

Manager Robbins, of the B. F. Keith Theater, states that many thousands of dollars worth of jewelry, currency and other articles of value have been recovered in the theater and restored to patrons who have lost them. Last week a well-known lady dropped a diamond crescent pin, valued at several hundred dollars, and it was found by an usher. She received it with extravagant gratitude the next day. One of the articles had a value of $1.500 and was a brooch studded with diamonds. Mr. Robbins says it is seldom that an article lost in the playhouse is not recovered, especially if found by one of the staff.

Margaret Dale originally made her debut at the old Jerard Avenue Theater with George Holland, and in her second season was prompted to play ingenue parfs, so promising and intelligent was acting then. Mr. Sothern specially engaged her last season to support him in New York in "If I Were King.", but typhold fever intervened, though she has no season to support she has no season to support him. typhoid fever intervened, though she has now returned to the fold.

Messrs. Lee and J. J. Shubert announce that they will shortly present the popular English comedian. Mr. Sam Sothern, in a new coniedy of character in three acts, entitled "Such is Life." The play is from the pen of Harold Owen, one of the authors of "Mr. Wu." the melodrama of Chinese life, in which Walker Whiteside appeared three seasons ago. Rehearsals will begin Monday under the direction of Mr. Sothern Aim Cleaver, a young and particularly talented English actress, has been engaged for the principal feminine role. Upon the conclusion of his American tour as the star of "A Pair of Sik Stockings," Mr. Sothern returned to England with the intention of remaining there permanently, but upon the advice of the Messrs. Schubert that they had accepted a comedy particularly suitable for his talents, he reversed his decision, and came over here.

Richard Walton Tully promises several novelites in the staging of "The Masquerader," in which Guy Bates l'ost will shortly star. One especially realistic scene will picture a London fog for which Tully has worked out some entirely new stage effects. Louis Calvert, the well-known English actor, who will support Mr. Post, and who should know whereof he speaks, says it is the kind of a fog "you have to eat your way through."

The stork recently visited the home of three persons prominently connected with "The Flame." Richard Walton Tully, author and producer of the play, is the proud father of a two-week-old daughter. William Courtleigh, who acts an important part in "The Flame," was this week presented with his fourth son, and on the same day James G. Peede, Tully's general manager, became the father of a baby girt.
